COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

Work on the T. R. I. road on Chandler Hill has been suspended for a week or two as two of our trucks are working on the State Aid Road on Route 35.

We have had many inquiries as to the result of the revaluation of residential property. In most cases there has been an increase in total amount paid or to be paid in 1967. In some cases there has been a reduction in tax money although the valuation has increased. This is because of a higher valuation previously that receives the benefit of the five mill reduction in the rate. At times the increase in valuation is not enough to make the tax bill higher. Commercial and agricultural property tax as a rule is lower as they were not appraised this year and they receive full benefit of the lower rate, but it must be remembered these categories have paid, for the last few years on a much higher valuation than residential property as a result of being the first appraised and brought up to a higher value.

MAINE TODAY

by Earle Doucette
SHE CRITICIZED THE

Every one often someone or other has to prove that all of us are not in a common mold. There is a result of their labor, we all turn out to be either a little better, a little worse, or just a little different. In the case of the Maine Yankee, the result is a little better, a little worse, or just a little different.

The above is, as we say, the most popular version of what the typical Maine man is, but it has remained for Dr. Julia Van Zanten, a member of the English faculty at Farmington State College, to smash this image to smithereens, at least in her estimation.

By and large, she has written, the Downeast Yankee is not hardy. He is weak. He is not a farmer. He is not a fisherman. He is not a logger. He is not a hunter. He is not a fisherman. He is not a logger. He is not a hunter.

Dr. Van Zanten is qualified, at least from her environment, to express the opinion that she did. She was born in New Hampshire, which is a considerable distance from Maine, came here at the age of six, and by her own account has lived Maine for half a century.

If Dr. Van Zanten set out to stir up a controversy it may have been that she has exceeded her duties as a woman. She will give some more carrying "letters to the editor," either praising or condemning the good lady.

I will do neither because I refuse to believe that there is any such thing as a stereotypical Maine character, and as he doesn't exist it is pointless to argue as to what he is like.

I have lived in Maine all my life and for over a quarter of a century I worked as public relations director for the State of Maine, and I have never seen a stereotypical Maine character. I have never seen a stereotypical Maine character.

Those attending the Fall conference of the Portland District at the First Methodist Church in Portland on Thursday were Mrs. Anne Gordon, Mrs. Arlene Walker, Miss Maudie Wilson and Mrs. Sarah Stevens.

where. We are composed of many ancestral antecedents, we are of various religions, and contrary to the belief held elsewhere, a Democrat is not a rare growth in a Republican garden.

Talk to an Arundel man for example, and you'll find that his diction hardly qualifies him as being a stereotypical Maine man. He tells his "No." When he says "No" he says "No" and not "Nah." To him, the hot season is the "summer" and the "sum" is the "sum" and so it goes. The Portlander and the man from Eastport make strange bedfellows in many ways. And in many places English is a second language, many other residents speaking French, German, Finnish, or Italian.

It is through these differences that we have gained our strength. Because regardless of what Dr. Van Zanten may believe, employees find the Maine worker to be superior in loyalty, in industry, in initiative and inventiveness. We have our weaknesses and as do everyone else, but all in all we are a pretty good people living in a wonderful state.

20 SECONDS WITH THE NAZARENE

There is a big difference between a mere desire to do a thing, and a burning passion to do it—a determination to accomplish it at any cost. A mere desire is like warm water in a locomotive—it will never produce steam. It takes fire and force and enthusiasm to generate the things that propel the successful character.

ESCAPE: FIRST RULE OF FIRE SAFETY

Exactly what would you do if right now you heard the crackle of fire in your kitchen?

Exactly what would you do if in the middle of the night your family was sleeping soundly and you awakened to the smell of smoke?

People who don't have ready answers to these questions are risking their family's and their own lives, declares Bethel Fire Chief Rudolph McMillin. For these are the people who don't know how to act when fire strikes in the home.

The first rule of safety from fire is to escape. Get everybody out of the very first sign of fire. But unless you have done some thinking and planning, you may not be able to escape. National Fire Protection Association studies show the great majority of the 2,000 U. S. lives taken by home fires last year were needlessly lost because of failure to prepare and rehearse escape maneuvers.

So prepare a home safety plan for your family. Urge Chief McMillin. Make sure everyone, including the children, know exactly what to do. Then hold family fire drills regularly.

Here are pointers to help you plan:

1. Carefully figure out at least two routes to the outside from every room in the house, especially bedrooms. Allow for blocking of stairways and halls by fire.

2. Particularly for nighttime fires, remember that closed bedrooms will hold back flame and smoke, allow extra time for escape.

3. For upper floor escape, use any available porch and garage roofs, ladders, or trees as ways down to safety. Be sure exit windows work easily, and that they are low and large enough to get through.

4. Pick an outside assembly point where the family will meet, and be sure everyone understands the rule "once out—stay out."

5. Know how to call the fire department, by a neighbor's phone or other method, and do this as quickly as the house is clear of people.

Sen. Muskie Reports

The Federal Water Pollution Control Administration held an statement conference earlier this year at Bethel. The topic was pollution in Penobscot Bay. In the summer issue of Maine Digest magazine there is an account of the conference proceedings. I would like to share portions of the story with you.

It reports that the Federal experts brought along a formidable report that gave a list of ten toxic, flammable and carcinogenic fish that took a weather beaten catch, who has wasted the living from the sea for most of his 50 years to put the picture in perspective.

He was Mr. Fred White Young, a Bethel lobster dealer. He arose from the audience in the regional high school and said, "Mr. Chairman, now I have a water-sucking fish, and you can eat it up if you have a mind to, but I've got to speak my piece."

I own 10 acres of shore property that I had just as soon see the tide come in as a public park. But we can't go down there and enjoy it anymore because of the grease from the chicken cauldrons and feathers. Now, I've got seven grandchildren and another on the way and I want to live to see the day when I can take them down there again.

We lost a million dollar seal-tongue fishery here in the Bay on account of pollution. We lost the Rounders and we lost the State had to close up the last of the clam beds and we are in real bad trouble. I've been fishing all up and down this coast from Eastport clear west to Cape Elizabeth and we never had nothing like we got around here now."

When Mr. Young finished he stepped back to the front of the room. He was the head of the class. He was the head of the class. He was the head of the class.

They are the first step toward improving the quality of water when pollution has caused substantial economic damage. The idea is to have everyone causing pollution and everyone affected by it sit down together to discuss their problems and to work together in establishing a plan for cleaning the water.

The last paragraphs of the Maine Digest story sum up the problem and I would like to repeat them. The solution will be expensive because pollution has been eating away at the State's resources for a great many years.

As if the death of young people from the State were not serious enough, it is equally tragic when Fred Young at 53, feels that he, too, may be compelled to join the exodus from the standpoint of natural resources.

SONGO POND

— Mrs. Ralph Kimball, Corres. —
Mrs. Marian Rich left early Sunday for her home in Roanoke, Virginia, after spending the summer at her summer home here. She will visit her sister, Dorothy Truman in New Jersey a few days on the way.

Several from this vicinity attended the World's Fair at North Waterford Saturday afternoon and evening.

This community was profoundly shocked and saddened to learn of the tragic death of Miss Jill Orino last Thursday night on her way home from evening classes at Plymouth State Teachers College. She was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Remco Orino who have had a cottage at the foot of the pond for many years. Our deepest sympathy goes to her parents and brother, Jack.

The Maine Forest Service is conducting classes this week for forest wardens at the Maine Forest Service building here. (the former Songo school).

Arlan Jodrey has purchased the Walter Jodrey cottage at the foot of the pond.

DO YOUR SHARE FOR FIRE PREVENTION

You can never be too careful when it comes to preventing fire. That's why good safety habits at home, at work, at play are the rule, never the exception. At home, check often to guard against accumulation of flammable debris, faulty wiring, other fire hazards. At work, obey fire department regulations to the letter. At play, make sure campfires are out, dead out. Caution now may save lives later.
